Tax question of direct telegraphic communication which has recently been agitated in Hongkong has also attracted some attention in connection with Australia. What is asked for here is direct communication between this port and Singapore, but with reference to Australia the matter has been carried farther back. It is pointed out that the present lines are peculiarly open to at- Hart as Inspector-General. tack in the neighbourhood of the Suez Canal, and it has been suggested that the cable now being laid along the West coast of Africa to the Cape of Good Hope should be extended to Australia in order to form an alternative route. The cable from the Cape to Australia might also touch . Mauritius, thus bringing another outlying dependency of the war into a race connection with the rest of the Empire: The undertaking would, however, be a very large one, and its accomplishment connut reasonably be expected for some time t come. It may also be pointed out that the completion of the cable along the West coast of Africa will give an alternative route to India wid-Natal and Aden, and will thus render communication with Australia more secure to the extent of diminishing the risk of interruption before India is reached. 5- The cables from Singapore to Australia, how-India, and are thus open to the same objection as the present cable between-Singapore aid Hongkong, which touches French territory at Caps St. James. A cable from the Cape to Australia would not have this disadvantage and a disadvantage. must be considered to be, not only in gespect of the contingency of our hour engaged in war with the nations over where territory the present cables pass, but . also in view of the extremely difficult and colicate question which has been'r dand as to whether a nation might not consider it. breach of neutrality to allow warlike messages to be transmitted over lines under its jurisdiction. A recent home paper said :--'If any additional argument were needed for the creation and maintenance by this country of a numerous and powerful cruiser flest, it would be found in the growing necessity of providing for the efficient protoction of our submarine cables. We may be certain that any enemy we may engage will be particularly active and enterprising in fishing up and severing our cable connections in every direction. Quite recently we were reminded that the Russians long ago elaborated a scheme for that purpose. Therefore Mr. Pender's contention that the Government should feel as much bound to protect its cables as it does, to protect its ships is, to say the least, most reasonable; and for the sake of the commerce of England it is to be hoped it will not fail to find prac- who have remained in that city. These remarks we entirely endorse, but it may not be out of place to ask what of use the cruisers month this year the Custom House has recogwould be in cases where the cable touches foreign soil and the maintenance of compoint at which the greatest danger threatens in this direction is at Cape St. James: for there the cable passes under control of a power which, in the event of England being embroiled is war, would certainly not be very benevolent in her neutrality, to say nothing of the possibility of our being engaged in hostilities with France herself, in which case the latter would have it in her power immediately to cut off the British fleet in the Previous to the ceremony of unveiling the bust, a preliminary gathering was held in the chapter of the house. Besides Lord Chief Justice Coloridge and Baron Houghton, there were present Lord Aberdare, Canon Farrer, Robert Browning, Prof. Blackie, and the whole Coleridge family, including a grandson and granddaughter of the poet. Many members of the House of Commons, Noblemen, Bishops, Descons and a large number of Americans were also in attendance. Dean Bradley and Mr. Lowell entered the chapter house arm in arm. The Dean made a short speech, in which he said he heartily sympathized with the object of the meeting. He paid a high tribute to Mr. Lowell, and said he On LONDON, was emineutly fitted to perform the duty of unveiling the statue. The ceremony, he said, would add another link to the many siready that bound together England and America. Mr. Lowell replied that he would have proferred that the task of unveiling the statue had been entrusted to other hands, but the fact that the bust is the gift of the late Rev. Dr. Mercer, of Rhode Island, through his executrix, Mrs. Pell, supplied that argument of fitness which would otherwise have been absent. He continged: "All the waters of Atlantic cannot wash." out of the consciousness of either nation that we hold our intellectual property in common. The literary traditions and fame of those who shed lustre upon our race remain an undivided inheritance. Coleridge's works are a companion and teacher in the happiest hours of our youth, and in old age recall the radiant images of the · youth which we have lost. Surely there are no friends so constant as poets—among them none are more faithful than Coloridge. Just fifty-one years ago I became postessed of a pirated American reprint of Coleridge, Shalley and Keats, and trust I may be pardoned for the delight. took in it. Coloridge was a metaphysical teacher, and interpreter whose services are incalculable." Mr. Lowell said he admired, especially the "Anoient Mariner," far more, indeed, than "Christabel." Mr. Coleride was a man artless simplicity, and yet a finished scholar, although not exact. He owed much to the genius. He was picturesque in the best sense of the term. Mr. Lowell concluded :- "This is neither the time nor place to speak of Coloridge's conduct to himself, his family, or the world. He left behind him a great name; let those who are blamsless cast the first stone at one who might have been better had he possessed those business faculties which make man respectable. He left us such a legacy as only genius, and genius not always, can leave." [Cheers.]

Lord Coloridge returned thanks on behalf the family. The assemblage then went to the Poets' Corner and Mr. Lowell formally unveiled the statue, which bears the simple inscription. "Samual Taylor Coloridge." THE DOMINION AND PEDERATION.
